

England flags everywhere. Declaration for the UK.

Have you noticed that St George's flags and Union flags are appearing in villages, towns and cities across the UK? Last month, flags appeared on lamp posts across some areas in Birmingham as an act of patriotism, which were taken down by the council as it was said that they might offend some residents as they are used by far-right activists.

People took to social media, and flags have started to appear by patriotic Brits across the nation, which has birthed a new movement called, Operation Raise the Colours. Even white roundabouts have acquired a red cross!

We came across this powerful declaration for the United Kingdom written by Dominic Leo Muir (30-8-25). Let's join in declaring this across our nation.

We declare that raising the national flag shall not be racist, jingoistic, or unwelcoming to the stranger.

We declare that to love our country shall not be idolatrous, but infused with God-given purpose, prophetic vision, neighbourly love, and agape compassion.

We declare that the United Kingdom is called to be an apostolic, fathering nation to the ends of the earth.

We declare that Jesus Christ is Lord of nations – that He is for the nations – and that the nations are the business of His Church, not only souls nor the institution of the Church itself.

We break off national shame, guilt, and every form of media, intellectual, and political witchcraft.

We cry out for awakening and revival to accompany the reformation that is required in this land.

We declare that we will not give away our land to foreign gods, nor to wicked and antichrist ideologies.

We declare that the United Kingdom shall not fall, but shall be a land, a people, a constitution, and a culture shaped by The Book.

We take back this nation for the Lord Jesus Christ alone.
We plead the blood of Christ over every hill and rock of this sceptred isle.

Lord, give us the United Kingdom – or we die.
Amen.
